inspire, inform, empower

Toolkit

Supported by:

Understand Your Life Skills

What are life skills?

Next

Some skills are specific to certain jobs. For example, a Software Developer needs to have strong programming skills, but would probably not need to be great at graphic design.

Steps

However, some core life skills – sometimes known as 'soft', 'baseline', or 'transferrable' skills – are important for any job in any sector.

These are skills such as:

- Communication
- Teamwork
- Flexibility
- Teamwor
- Orga
- Confidence
- Initiative
- Organisation
- Problem solving
- Time management

This PDF is interactive, so that you can fill out digitally. What life skills do you have?

Through a mix of schoolwork and extra-curricular activities, you will have developed many of these skills to different levels without even realising it.

Fill in the table below to help you think about your transferrable skills.

Tip: If you can't think of any extra-curricular activities, think of things you do at school. Have you done any group work, or given a presentation?

Activity	Tasks	Skills
 In this column, write down activities that you do regularly. E.g., playing on a sports team, singing in a choir, volunteering, working at your part-time job, etc. 	<text></text>	<text></text>

Communicating your life skills

What are some of your strengths?

Employers aren't mind-readers! So, when you're applying for jobs, you will need to tell them exactly what skills you have and how you've developed and demonstrated them.

Use the notes you made in the table above to fill in the STAR templates below. This will give you an idea of how to talk about your life skills.

I am good at:

Situation:	I regularly take part in / work as
Task:	This involves
Action:	I have to use my skill to
Results:	This means that

Situation:	l regularly take part in / work as
	This involves
Task:
	I have to use my skill to
Action:
	This means that
Results:

	I regularly take part in / work as Situation:
	This involves
Task:
	I have to use my skill to
Action:
	This means that Results:

FUTUREGOALS

Supported by:

BURBERRY FOUNDATION

